Reference for Johann Gutenbrunner

To Whom It May Concern:

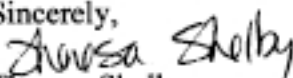

In my role as software developer for Texas Instruments Incorporated, I had the privilege of knowing and working with Johann Gutenbrunner the last 6 years. Johann and I collaborated on software localizations for the Windows™ based software product called Derive™. Johann was the localization project manager for Derive 5, released in 9 languages and Derive 6, released in 11 languages. Besides localizing brand new releases, Johann also managed the localization of Derive 5 and 6 "try before you buy" simultaneous versions and minor updates.

Johann's responsibility in managing Derive localizations included scheduling the overall timeline from the translation of the help file to the testing and final integration of each localized version. He is also proficient at using software tools to compile and build various language components while maintaining procedures for others to follow.

Johann excels at international communication between several parties none of whom may speak the same language or live in the same time zone. He communicated and facilitated between translation partners, testing personnel, developers and managers. He is very skilled at multi-tasking, speaking, and thinking in multiple languages while still keeping a sense of humor.

Johann is thorough, determined, persistent, reliable, resourceful, helpful and deadline-oriented. This past summer we pooled our resources to complete a Japanese localization of Derive 6.1. This was our first Far Eastern localization and proved to be most challenging. I was delighted to have Johann leading the localization project and highly recommend him for software translation services.

Sincerely,

Theresa Shelby
